Dear Sir:

In response to your recent advertizement in the Los Angeles Times, I believe I am a bright intelligent man, self reliant and able to take the initiative in challenging situations that demand critical on-the-spot decisions. I am very interested in pursuing a professional career with the Central Intelligence Agency that will use my skills and talents to the fullest. I am willing to live and work overseas as well as in the United States.

I am a U. S. citizen. I have several college degrees. I have studied Latin for four years, French for two years and Spanish for two years. Although I am not currently fluent in these languages, I have exceptional learning ability in this area and with proper training could become proficient in any foreign language in a relatively short time. I have friends and acquaintances of many nationalities and have demonstrated my ability to communicate with diverse people. I have traveled extensively both abroad and within the United States. I have visited many countries in Asia, Europe, South America and Central America. I have an interest in foreign affairs as demonstrated by my travels, my academic studies and my work experience.

My resume is enclosed.

Yours truly,

STAT

P.S. I have served in two branches of the U.S. military services: Pilot training, U.S.A.F.; Midshipman and Ensign, U.S.N.R. In addition, I am a licensed shipboard officer, steam and diesel, unlimited horsepower, in the U.S. Merchant Marines.
